?how is skype pronounced

.IMPORTANCE of accurate and timely control and status reporting of mics (on/off (green/red) is better terminology)

.a continuing problem of the list disappearing and status of zero participants be reported (fixed by muting-unmuting)

.add/edit casts for immediate future

.automatic group chat

.kick and block from re-entering (chat/talk)

.remove limitations on characters in titles and descriptions

.allow for longer descriptions

.weekly scheduling into far future

.manage (my casts) keep some beyond to weeks... delete others

.contacts control (hierarchical folders)

.people have reported an inability to see the full description of the cast or the associated url (perhaps they don't know how to use the system)

.cast-hopping problem with only one cast window -- using (back)

?what is the purpose of moving casts into the app

?what are skype's intentions for casting

?what are your intentions for mac

?web or app

.why not return to the way it was in the beginning... include enough in the app to draw people to it

.i haven't seen the windows app, but i'm worried about what i've heard

?how many windows are necessary for skypecasting

.one web window

- on now

- coming soon

- all casts (why?)

- my casts

.two skype windows

- call windows — for switching between casts (in skype)

- chat windows

06/12/21 — 14:38

my arrogance

.a way i talk leads some people to think i'm arrogant

.here's how it works...

- i say something

- a sape hears what i say and asks itself, "what would my intentions be if i was talkin' like that?"

- then they attribute their own intentions to me... they assume that their own intentions are also mine... and are then angry with me

- .the "problem" of consciousness is solved by understanding a bug in english called reification
- .there is no such "thing" as consciousness
- .a "thing" is something you can put in a bucket
- .it has properties that can be measured, independent of our ideas/opinions
- .words like consciousness, dignity, truth, enlightenment, mind, collaboration, etc. do not refer to "things"
- .they refer a relationships between things and have an entirely different ontological status
- .so we can't ask what consciousness IS
- .we can only ask, "what do you mean when you use that word"

- .when i was about five, i was totally enamored of roy rogers
- .i wanted to BE him
- .but i figured out that i couldn't
- .roy rogers had roy rogers' memories
- .so, even if i could become him for a while, i couldn't appreciate the transformation, because i (heron) would have to have my own memories to "appreciate" my being roy

system

.my system has been screwed up since 10.3

.long ago, i should have have just wiped my drives and reinstalled everything

.but i'm lazy and the problems were annoying enough to make me want to go thru reinstalltng everything

.anyway, it's time now to start over

.i bought an ext fw hd to install on

.but the install app quit half way thru

.i repeated once with the same result

.two possibilities:

- my install dvd was bad

- my dvd player was malfunctioning

.i had previously had some problems playing DVDs and also burning DVDs

.so i brought my install dvd and ext fw hd to a friends mac and tried to install

.it worked fine

.that appeared to settle the issue... i would replace my dvd burner

.i installed the burner yesterday and immediately tried the install

.i got the same behavior as before... installer quit

.so now i'm wondering... what's going on

?can bad memory have been responsible for my numerous, weird system behaviors and crashes

?can i test memory adequately or must i just buy new memory and see what happens... that doesn't seem like a good way to proceed

?some other hardware issues

.i don't know what to do next
.help

MACBOOK or MACBOOK PRO

.i need at least 160 gb hd
.i will install windoze
.2 gb ram is probably enough

?what difference does the 128mb graphics card in the pros make... is it just for gamers
.even the slowest 1.83ghz model will out-perform my dual 1.25ghz mmd g4... but, of course, faster is nicer

.the basic difference i see between book and bookpro is

- graphics memory: 64 vs 128
- screen: 1280 _ 800 vs 1440 _ 900
- speed: 1.83 vs 2.16
- size: 1_12.8_8.9 vs 1_14.1_9.6
- weight: 5.2 lbs vs 5.6 lbs
- battery: 6 hrs vs 5 hrs
- firewire: 400 vs
- price: $1,418 vs $2,099

?what other factors should i be considering

.this will probably become my main mac

.it's not clear to me exactly how it will work out... using the book to push my 21 in mitsubishi monitor and accessing the media drives inside my old g4

?is it easy to add my own ram

?can i replace the drive

?can i use it at home for 8 or 10 hrs at a time

?will that require a cooler of some sort
?can i get it cheaper
?no sales tax if purchased from someplaces

Monkeys fluent in baby talk

Discovery suggests that man's ga-ga-goo-gooing might be biological in origin, scientists say

By William Mullen | Tribune staff reporter

August 24, 2007

Adult rhesus macaques make high-pitched, sing-songy vocalizations when they encounter infant monkeys -- just the kind of sounds humans seem to naturally fall into using around infants, scientists reported this week.

Seeing the adult monkeys use a form of baby talk suggests the behavior in humans may be biological in origin, said Dario Maestripieri, associate professor of comparative human development at the University of Chicago.

In monkeys the vocalizations are called "girneys," a sound completely different from any other the animal makes, he said. "It's a very strange sound," he said, "made with their mouths almost closed, sort of nasal and relatively soft. I can't replicate it, but it is used almost exclusively when adult monkeys see babies."

Previous studies by other scientists had concluded that when a rhesus monkey approached a mother and its baby, it directed the girney vocalization at the mother to signal the caller's intentions were benign and harmless -- that it was not threatening mother or child.

But after watching 19 adult females in a family of 65 rhesus monkeys on the Puerto Rican island of Cayo Santiago daily for months at a time, co-author Jessica Whitham said she saw something quite different was happening.

"Actually, they are looking at the baby when they are producing these vocalizations, so we think they are intended for the baby, not the mother," said Whitham, a recent PhD student of Maestripieri's. "They also mix in grunt vocalizations, but the girney may be more similar to baby talk, an acoustic structure intentionally designed to attract attention of the infant."

The intent seemed simply to get the infant to look over and make eye contact with the caller, she said, then to amuse the infant, much as a human might try to get a baby to smile.

A rhesus macaque wanting to charm a tot has an advantage over a human: Besides babbling in baby tongues, it can wag its tail. The monkeys often wag their tails in the presence of a monkey infant, like a human using a rattle to entertain the little one.

Maestripieri and Whitham published a paper on their findings Friday in the research journal Ethology, based on observations made with a third co-author, Melissa Gerald of the University of Puerto Rico, of free-ranging families of rhesus macaques living on the island in 2004 and 2005.

The girney sound "may be adaptively designed to attract young infants and engage their attention, similar to how the acoustic structure of human motherese, or baby talk, allows adults to visually or socially engage with infants," Maestripieri said.

The use of baby talk by the monkeys differs dramatically from human baby talk in some respects. For one, only adult female monkeys use the girney vocalization. Male rhesus monkeys have never been observed using it, but they also take virtually no part in rearing the young. And monkey baby talk is associated only with monkey infants, while Whitham points out humans use it with pets and lovers as well.

Also unlike humans, monkey mothers never engage in baby talk with their own babies. It is strictly a vocalization used by females who seem to have a deep fascination for a baby belonging to another monkey, taking great pleasure when they can get the baby's attention.

"They watch the infants so intently, scratching themselves as a show of their excitement, and often wagging their tails while emitting a long string of these vocalizations," Whitham said.

Scratching themselves on the arms, legs, bellies and heads is a common monkey behavior to show excitement, said Maestripieri, but it is rare to see a monkey wag its tail.

"Tail wagging is very specific to babies," he said. "Monkeys get excited about a lot of things, like finding their favorite food, but they don't wag tails unless it is associated with seeing a baby."

Rhesus macaques

The species is native to India, but in the 1930s American researchers established a semi-wild breeding colony at Cayo Santiago. About 850 of the monkeys now live on the island, overseen by the University of Puerto Rico but used by scholars from all over the world. The monkeys are free-ranging, living in six naturally formed social groups. The females stay in the family groupings for life, but the males leave and join other family groupings when they reach puberty.

please allow me to introduce myself

.i've been dropping in and out of a.p.z for a couple of years now

.i'm expecting an outbreak of enlightenment over the next 30 to 50 years

.i prefer the word "liberation"

?can we end the one-upmanship

.can we work together to facilitate the transition

.i'm inviting anyone here to join in a conversation on skypecast

.i enjoy a good friendly but rigorous discussion of issue that make a difference in the world

.i will be posting observations/musings as they arise in my ongoing development/evolution

.your responses are welcomed

.i wonder how many people read a.p.z. and never post

?what do they see here... people arguing and playing games of epistemological one-upmanship

.the fact that 90% of the traffic here comes from 3 people is tragic... shameful... an indication of the state of consciousness on Earth (272)

.if you are one of the lurkers, it's time to join in

- .don't be afraid of looking bad
- .just tell your truth as best you can
- .you will gain clarity as your confusion becomes more and more apparent to you

- .yes... it's so clear to me now...
- .i am completely confused
- .i don't have a clue about what's going on
- .i've got some theories
- .isn't that nice

sports or history

- .it's easy to be interested in sports
- .they spoon feed you in the paper and magazines
- .you don't have to think... just absorb what the system gives you
- .being involved in the transformation of Earth requires that you do independent research... and some creative thinking

yoga postures

- .various postures can be useful
- .an important aspect of postures is be conscious of the perceptual experiences in detail
- .the positions of the thumbs knuckles, findertips, degree of flex in finger joints
- .it's not unrelated to counting breaths
- ?how many breaths can you count before losing track
- .any way, while you're focusing on the minutae of yoga postures or counting breathes, you're not able to be worrying about making a mortgage payment or whether you son is taking drugs for the wrong reasons

- .over time a new small self emerges... not the big self... but a bigger small self... one that is not bound by language
- .most humans have never known a conscious moment when their language machine wasn't yammering away about something
- .they think that voice is who they are
- .one of the main virtues of meditation is that it puts the language machine on the front burner
- .a student is confronted with the fact of her inability to control the language machine
- .if you're paying attention, this is humbling
- .breaking identification with the language machine is what i call liberation
- .i can't say who/what i am
- .but i'm certain that the voice in my head is produced by the programming in my language machine

We talked several days ago...
My perfectionism is both a blessing and a nuisance, especially when it comes to writing. I struggle with finding a balance between detail and brevity.

Please give me 10 minutes of your time. Maybe not right now... maybe later... maybe tomorrow.
It will take less than 10 minutes for you to understand the implications of what i'm talking about, and to know whether you agree or not... whether we have any business together or not.

English is the language of Earth.
It is the language of Earthlings.
It is the language of the future.

.it is humbling (and just plain awesome) to admit a possibility that the universe could merely cease to exist at any moment

how to deal with a child who is obnoxious in society

*if they are obnoxious, they don't get to go out with you

.the family is a team

.if someone is going out into the world, arrangements must be made to see that the obnoxious child is cared for

.the child must prove their ability to behave civilly, earn the privilege to join society/the party/club/company/family/order/fellowship/guild/lodge/crew/gang

.it's the parents' responsibility to not subject us to the obnoxious behavior of their badly-programmed little sapes

.people have no RIGHT to reproduce if they are contributing ill-mannered, violent, misanthropes to our club

.i chose not to be involved in child rearing

.i realized that i wasn't prepared to sacrifice my life for child

.i'm too selfish for that

.i'm too interested in my own development to give myself wholeheartedly to raising a child

.i respect others' decision to do that .i appreciate what a difficult choice it is
.but, having made that choice, they have no right to impose their badly programmed offspring on the rest of us dog and stick and gate story

.when i was a college student, i cleaned doctors offices at nights
. i always brought my dog with me
.he was intelligent and well behaved
.i was taking a break and throwing a small stick at a pull-down gate that was pulled down
.art (my dog) was fetching the stick when it bounced off the gate

.but on one occasion the stick managed to go thru the gate rather than bounce off
.art was upset
.he stood there... looking thru the gate at the stick just inches away...
unattainable
.he pawed at the gate
.he looked at me.
.he whimpered
.then he sat there quietly for about 20 seconds... almost frozen in place it seemed to me
.all of a sudden he jumped up and dashed in the opposite direction from the stick... following the path shown below

.he got the stick and brought it back to me

.he seemed quite pleased with himself

I have a 15" 2.4 GHz MBP with 4 GBs RAM, matte screen. It's in great condition.

It took me a long time to decide between the 15" and the 17". I finally settled on the 15" because I thought the 17" was gonna be over-kill... and too big and heavy to lug around.

I'm not regretting my decision. I love my MBP, but i'm beginning to realize that the 17" would work even better for me.

If you're thinking that your 17" is too big and wish you had the advantages of a 15", let's talk. Maybe we can make a deal that will work for both of us.

learning a new language

.there's a guy studying english vocabulary with "flashcards"

- .some words are defined by pointing to some process/object in experience... things
- .some words are defined by other words
- .what it means to "know" something often means to know what words to associate with it
- .native speakers have automatized the process of word association to such a degree that it feels like the same kind of knowledge as knowledge of objects
- .native speakers mistake facility with language for knowledge of things
- .new learners can avoid much of a native speaker's linguistic unconsciousness

- .$270 is the price i'd pay if i just walked in off the street and wasn't a subscriber and wanged to buy the fon and leave without a contract
- ?who would do that
- ?why
- ?how many people in the past year have paid $270 for this fon
